GNAC News & Notes

AND THEN THERE WERE TWO: After two weeks of conference play, only two teams have made it through undefeated. As it turns out, both teams hail from the 49th state.

Alaska enters this week on a seven-match win streak after a pair of victories in the Patty Center last week. The Nanooks collected a four-set win over Seattle Pacific on Thursday, putting the brakes on the Falcons' six-match streak before scoring a three-set sweep over Montana State Billings on Saturday.

The Nanooks have gelled well as a team, averaging 12.54 kills per set while ranking second in the conference in both blocks (2.60 per set) and aces (1.80 per set) while leading the conference with a .130 opponent hitting percentage.

Alaska Anchorage is riding a four-match win streak after posting a pair of three-set sweeps over Montana State Billings on Thursday and Seattle Pacific on Saturday. Of the Seawolves' 11 wins on the season, eight have come in three sets.

The Seawolves lead the conference with a .227 hitting percentage and 2.32 aces per set while averaging 12.47 kills per set.

Both teams take to the road this week with a pair of tough contests that will test their staying power in the conference race. Alaska plays at Simon Fraser on Thursday while Alaska Anchorage is at Western Washington. The teams switch opponents on Saturday.

WILDCATS DOWN RANKED FOES, EARN TEAM OF THE WEEK NOD: With two Top-25 teams on the schedule after a 1-1 opening week, outside observers could be forgiven for assuming this would be a tough stretch for Central Washington women's volleyball. Instead, after two dominant signature wins, the Wildcats are now poised to make a run in the GNAC.

The Wildcats defeated No. 15 Western Washington in four sets on Thursday before downing No. 22 Simon Fraser in a three-set sweep on Saturday. For running the table against nationally-ranked competition, CWU Volleyball has been named the GNAC Team of the Week.

"This was a big weekend on the calendar and to come away with two wins is huge," head coach Mario Andaya said. "Western Washington and Simon Fraser are top GNAC and regional contenders, so we had to bring our best. I am just grateful to our crowd for bringing the energy this weekend and firing up our team."

Central Washington started with an in-state rivalry clash with No. 15 Western Washington. The Vikings were flying high after a head-to-head win over Simon Fraser, but Central Washington quickly brought them down to earth with a 25-13 first set win. Although Western Washington rallied to take the second set, CWU opened up another large margin of victory in the third, winning that set 25-15 before sealing the win with a 25-23 fourth set triumph.

With No. 22 Simon Fraser coming to town next, CWU had an immediate opportunity to prove Thursday's performance wasn't a fluke. The Wildcats were in control from the opening whistle, winning 25-17, 25-21, 25-15.
